STATEMENT

26 This bill provides that, in cases involving custody of a child, a 27 parent who makes a good faith allegation based on a reasonable
28 belief supported by facts that the child is the victim of child abuse 29 and acts lawfully and in good faith in response to that reasonable 30 belief to protect the child or seek treatment for the child would not 31 be deprived of custody, visitation or contact with the child, or 32 restricted in custody, visitation or contact based solely on that belief 33 or the reasonable actions taken based on that belief.

34 This bill makes it a disorderly persons offense when a person 35 knowingly files or causes to be filed a report of a false allegation of 36 child abuse or neglect, as determined by the Division of Youth and 37 Family Services, with the purpose to influence a child custody
38 proceeding. A disorderly persons offense is punishable by a term of 39 imprisonment of up to six months or a fine of up to $1,000, or both.

40 This bill is modeled, in part, after a New York law, 2008 N.Y.
41 ALS 538, which was enacted into law on September 4, 2008. A 42 similar Tennessee law was enacted into law on May 28, 2004. Like 43 the New York and Tennessee laws, this bill is intended to protect 44 parents from being penalized in custody cases for making good faith
45 efforts to protect their child from abuse.

1 However, the bill goes one step further by criminalizing the 2 behavior of those who would use bad faith reports of child abuse or 3 neglect to influence child custody proceedings.
